Comments:

Since Group 2 members of the CUWCC provide a fraction of 1% of the funds to keep CUWCC functioning, and since water agencies provide about 98% of the funding for the organization, why should the Group 2 participants have the right to appeal a water agency's certification. Once a water agency is certified, there should not be an individual or group that can undo this.
Who knows better than the agency receiving the certification whether or not it has complied with the BMPs?

If Group 2 is allowed to challenge water agency certification because some believe this to be "due process," why shouldn't dues paying members of Group 3 be allowed to do the same? Bottom line is that if water agencies are footing the bill for the certification

Use additional sheets if necessary. process to even occur, it is not appropriate for members of the other two groups, who pay an infinitesimal amount of annual operating costs -- to undo granted certifications.
